

Mutualism and Cooperation

CJSSQ 2004 – A Co-op? Sweet!

You will no doubt have noticed the article on the Intranet announcing the return of the SSQ Youth Cooperative (CJSSQ) in Summer 2004. You will probably also have received a copy of the CJSSQ leaflet with full details of the project, including information on how your child can apply to join the co-op.

The CJSSQ, an initiative started up by the committee to promote mutualism at SSQ, is now in its second year. It truly is a unique way for young people to learn more about mutualistic values and principles and discover how cooperatives work, develop leadership skills and the ability to work autonomously, and become more aware of their capacities and collective responsibility.

So you want to give a helping hand to one of your colleagues' sons, daughters, nieces, nephews, or even grandchildren (the average age at SSQ is still fairly high...) this summer? Then why not make the most of the services that the 2004 CJSSQ will be offering from the end of June? You'll be able to show these young people that here at SSQ, our heart's in the right place!

For further information, please contact the CJSSQ advisory committee by e-mail at cjssq@ssq.ca.
